Soviet Union Extends Invitation to All Americans

TOURISM ENCOURAGED

The USSR welcomes visitors and was host to more than 700,000 in 1960. Thousands of Americans visited the Soviet Union and returned with eager accounts of the rewards and fascinations of their travels. Spread over the largest area of any nation, the Soviet Union can be intensely European or mysteriously Asiatic; it's a blend of many cultures and peoples (15 proud republics in the Soviet Union); climate runs from tangerine-scented sub-tropical, to mild temperate, to Arctic.

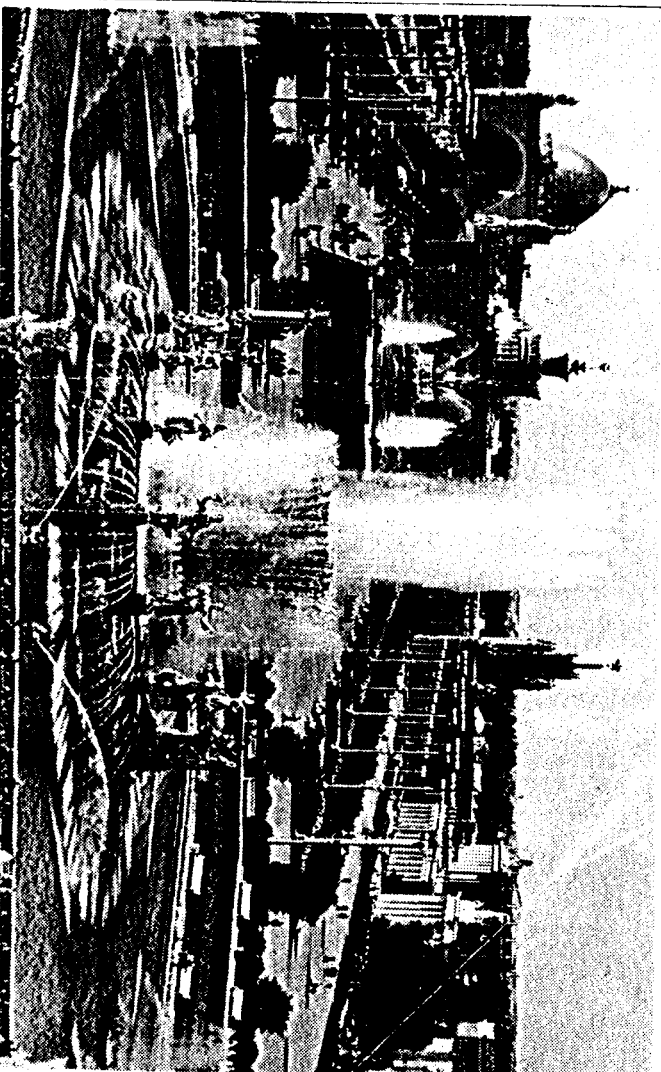

Travel To USSR Easy as ABC

It is no more complicated than the usual procedure for travel to many other foreign countries: all you need is a U.S. Passport and a Russian visa, which your Travel Agent will secure for you. Since 1955, the United States and the Soviet Union have had agreements which serve to encourage and promote tourism, cultural exchanges, and business and professional study groups.

Country Of Contrasts

It offers bountiful pleasures for every taste and interest. Bask on the palm-fringed shores of Sochi and Yalta... sail and cruise the Black Sea... hunt abundant stag, bear or foxes in the Crimea... ride through the dramatic, snow-capped mountains where every turn of the road reveals a more photogenic vista, a more breath-taking view... stroll through the palaces of the Tsars, and the estates of great poets, musicians, and artists.

Culture & Entertainment

Moscow, Leningrad, Kiev, each of many cities presents a personality of its own. You'll want to attend operas, theaters, concerts, ballets, sports spectacles. You must see Moscow's fabled Kremlin, a startling melange of cathedrals, palaces and museums, and the seat of Soviet Government activity. Among other attractions, Leningrad offers the Hermitage, one of the world's great art museums, with a superb collection of Masters, including Leonardo da Vinci, Raphael, Cezanne, Rembrandt and many more.

The USSR... is more than co-operative farming and industrial immensely... and these you'll surely want to see. But to know the Soviet Union, you must walk through its magnificent parks, sip its wines and sample its unusual foods, hear its folk songs, marvel at its ancient wonders, and its modern achievements, experience the happy welcome of its people.
